The Slugline

Rebellion of Thought... a critical look at the role of faith in a post-modern culture.

The Synopsis

Rebellion of Thought is a controversial road movie for a post-modern culture. What began as an exploration of popular ideologies quickly became a journey into life and faith and how people live their faith in the world around them.

Filmmakers Brad and Kent C. Williamson (aka The Brothers Williamson) began by interviewing philosophers and theologians about the cultural shift known as post-modernism. Along the way they were swept into the film when they realized that at the center of the controversy is an issue that impacts nearly everyone... faith.

What is post-modernism? How has it affected our culture? How will it impact our future? What is the role of the church in a post-modern world? Does Man truly need God or is God merely a fairytale idea left-over from a past cultural experiment?

These questions are the launching point for Rebellion of Thought. This "seriously amazing film" by the Brothers Williamson dares to explore critical issues that others fear to touch... and it does so in a personal and riveting manner.

KENT C. WILLIAMSON

BRAD WILLIAMSON

The Brothers Williamson are comprised of Brad Williamson and Kent C. Williamson. Born and raised on the border of Mexico, they both grew up eating jalapeños and seeing the world through the lens of the camera. Their first collaboration resulted in the dramatic motion picture When Love Walks In, “a believable, tender love story” that has audiences laughing, crying and saying things like “I really couldn’t stop smiling. It was touching and real.” Kent plays the film’s lead, but keep your eye out for Brad’s cameo as the ex-con. Their work on Rebellion of Thought resulted in a challenging and thought-provoking documentary that explores faith in a post-modern world.

Kent spearheads the Paladin Media Group, a film and video production company committed to the creation, production, distribution, and promotion of redemptive entertainment and educational media. He dwells along the Blue Ridge Mountains with his bride and five kids.

Brad runs interLogic, Inc., consults for the International Atomic Energy Agency and for nuclear power companies around the globe. He lives with his wife and four kids on the shores of Lake Michigan.

MIXTAPES FOR GIRLFRIENDS

Mixtapes for Girlfriends was a side project created by Brian Jerin and Ric Miller at their home recording studio in Jacksonville, Florida. The song "All you love, you lose" was conceived during the winter of 2003. Brian and Ric wanted to experiment with rhythmic beats, looped guitars, and lush vocals. This new minimalistic project was a step outside of Brian and Ric's rock and roll roots. However, the collaboration created a unique sound that has raised eyebrows in their corner of the earth. After writing and performing for more than 9 years together, Ric now resides in Colorado. Brian remains in Jacksonville and has a new band called Shangrala which recently revived "All you love, you lose". The new version will be available on the band's freshman independent release in the not so distant future. www.myspace.com/shangrala
